

Henderson State University Minor in Anthropology

The Department of Sociology, Human Services/Social Work and Criminal Justice offers a minor in Anthropology. Students at Henderson State University can learn about the diversity of human cultures, develop critical thinking and data collection skills, and examine the discipline as a possible area of graduate study. Several of these Anthropology courses fulfill HSU's Non-Western Culture core requirement, or may be applied to a minor in Museum Studies, a certificate in Forensics, or the BS in Criminal Justice. In addition, research experience in archeology is available through courses and at HSU's Archeological Research Station and the Caddo Center on campus.

The minor in Anthropology requires 12 hours made up of two introductory courses and two upper-level courses in Anthropology.

Undergraduate courses in Anthropology offered at HSU:

- ANT 2013, "Introduction to Cultural Anthropology"
- ANT 2023, "Introduction to Physical Anthropology & Archeology"
- ANT 3043, "North American Indians"
- ANT 3096, "Archeology Field School" (scheduled occasionally)
- ANT 4053, "World Cultures"
- ANT 4083, "Readings & Research in Anthropology" (speak with department chair)

For more information on the Anthropology minor, contact:

Shari Valentine

Assistant Professor of Human Services/Sociology

PHN: 870-230-5414

Dr. Joyce Shepherd, Chair

Department of Sociology, Human Services/Social Work, and Criminal Justice

HSU Box 7661

Arkadelphia, AR 71999